EMC Publishing Licensing and Technology Agreement

Indiana Public Schools

EMC Publishing permits the use and installation of all Mirrors & Windows: Connecting with Literature program components (online links and CD/DVD) to individual school computers and to the district server where applicable, for the duration of the textbook program implementation within each district. This district or school access and use of the technology components is based on the confirmed purchase of student textbooks, with the understanding that each pupil will receive a company purchased hardcover student textbook or online student edition. Program purchases not based on a ratio of one student textbook per district/grade student population will have access based on the negotiable terms determined by mutual agreement between the district and EMC Publishing. It is also understood that the placement of all EMC components onto a secure network district server will only be accessed by district personnel or designated students within the district or school.

It is understood that the accompanying program materials for Mirrors & Windows: Connecting with Literature is the Publisher's exclusive property and acknowledges that EMC Publishing holds all benefits of copyright in the aforementioned program material. Each Indiana district or school agrees to protect the material to assure it is used only as described above. Each Indiana district or school further agrees that it will not sell the program material for profit to the student or redistribute the program material to any third party. EMC extends permission to use the material for so long as Mirrors & Windows: Connecting with Literature remains a required textbook to be purchased by Indiana schools or districts. The Indiana school or district that purchases the aforementioned program also agrees to include the following credit line on all iterations of the program material:
